This document is designed to help agents understand, explain, and document core personal insurance solutions. Content is carrier-agnostic and reflects general industry principles.

Term Life Insurance

Purpose & Use

Term life insurance provides coverage for a specific period of time. It is commonly used to help protect temporary financial responsibilities such as income replacement, mortgages, education funding, and debts.

Key Characteristics

- Coverage lasts for a defined term
- Premiums are generally level during the term
- Policies do not accumulate cash value
- Death benefit is payable if death occurs during the term

Agent Considerations

Suitability should be tied to the duration of the obligation being protected. Agents should review renewal options, conversion provisions, and policy limitations.

Whole Life Insurance

Purpose & Use

Permanent life insurance is designed to provide long-term coverage and may include a cash value component. It is often used for lifetime protection, estate considerations, and long-range financial planning.

Key Characteristics

- Coverage is intended to last for the insured's lifetime, subject to policy terms
- Premium structures vary by product design
- Cash value accumulation depends on policy mechanics
- Death benefit is generally payable regardless of age at death

Agent Considerations

Permanent policies require clear explanation of costs, assumptions, and long-term commitment. Policy performance is not guaranteed beyond contractual provisions.

Universal Life Insurance

Purpose & Use

Universal life insurance is a form of permanent life insurance designed to provide long-term coverage with flexible premiums and a policy value component. It is often used when clients want lifetime protection with the ability to adjust funding over time, subject to policy requirements.

Key Characteristics

- Coverage is intended to last for the insured's lifetime, subject to sufficient policy values and policy terms
- Premium payments are generally flexible within policy limits
- Policy values may accumulate based on credited interest rates, charges, and policy performance
- Cost of insurance and policy expenses are deducted from the policy value
- Death benefit options and policy funding levels impact long-term sustainability

Agent Considerations

Universal life policies require careful explanation of funding discipline, policy charges, and interest crediting mechanics.

Policy performance is not guaranteed beyond contractual minimums, and insufficient funding may result in increased costs or policy lapse. Ongoing monitoring is essential to maintain coverage.

Individual Disability Insurance

Purpose & Use

Disability insurance helps replace a portion of earned income if a client is unable to work due to illness or injury.

Key Characteristics

- Benefits are typically paid monthly
- Definitions of disability vary by policy
- Elimination periods affect when benefits begin
- Benefit periods determine payment duration

Agent Considerations

Agents should evaluate occupation class, income verification, and existing employer coverage. Policy language should be reviewed carefully with clients.

Supplemental Health & Gap Coverage

Purpose & Use

Supplemental health policies provide cash benefits for specific medical events and are intended to complement primary health insurance.

Key Characteristics

- Benefits are typically paid directly to the insured
- Coverage is event-specific
- Funds may be used at the insured's discretion

Agent Considerations

These policies should not be presented as comprehensive medical coverage. Clear explanation of benefit triggers and exclusions is essential.
